Q. What is Intellectual Property Rights & Explain the types of intellectual property.

→ Introduction.

Intellectual property (IP) is a category of property that includes intangible creations of the human intellect. There are many types of intellectual property, and some countries recognize more than others. The most well-known types are copyrights, patents, trademarks, & trade secrets. The modern concept of intellectual property developed in England in the 17th & 18th centuries. The term "intellectual property" began to be used in the 19th century, though it was not until the late 20th century that intellectual property became commonplace in the majority of the world's legal systems.

The main purpose of intellectual property law is to encourage the creation of a wide variety of intellectual goods. To achieve this, the laws gives people & business property rights to the information & intellectual goods they create, usually for a limited period of time. This gives economic incentive for their creation, because it allows people to benefit from the information & intellectual they create, & allows them to protect their ideas & prevent copying. These economic incentives are expected to stimulate innovation & contribute to the technological progress of countries. Without it being depicted. Additionally, investments in intellectual goods suffer from problems of depredation & landowner their land with a robust fence and hire armed guards to protect it, but a producer of information or literature can usually do very little to stop their first buyer from replicating it & selling it at a lower price. Balancing rights so that they are strong enough to encourage the creation of intellectual goods but not so strong that they prevent the goods wide use is the primary focus of modern intellectual property laws.

Intellectual property rights include patents, Copyright, industrial design rights, trademarks, plant variety rights, trade dress, geographical indications, & in some jurisdictions trade secrets.

"Industrial property" is sometimes used to refer to a large subset of intellectual property rights including patents, trademarks, designs, utility models, service marks, trade names, & geographical indications.
